Imperial Savants studying the splinter fleet incursions within the Eastern Fringes have recorded a rare Zoanthrope that deviates from the usual bulbous neuro-beast pattern. This creature – designated The Veiled Synapse appears as a sinuous, floating tadpole like organism with a long tapering body and distended cranial sac.

The creature appears to possess a higher level of psychic mastery than other Zoanthropes likely due to the hives consumption of a rare Xeno’s species, or mutation within the Hive Fleet. Limited survivor records mean the Imperium is still awaiting this classification.

Its bone armor bears irregular leopard like spotting which grants the creature the ability to blend into its surroundings, be it in the open, shadows, foliage or ruins. Survivors claim that the creature can appear to vanish, only for its swollen brain-node to reappear somewhere else across the battlefield moments later.

SPECIAL RULES

FLY. The Veild Synapse is able to fly across the battlefield exactly the same way as a creature equipped with a jetpack as described on page 71 of the Wargear book, SYNAPSE CREATURE. All Tyranids within 12” automatically pass any Leadership tests. The Veiled Synapse causes Fear. Is immune to psychology and will pass any break test.

VEILED PREDATOR. The creatures camouflage disrupts target acquisition and so all enemies suffer an additional -1 to hit the creature. This stacks with cover, so when in hard cover the cumulative modifier would be -3.
